Bench declined to accept plea

The vacation bench of Justices Rakesh Singh Chaudhary and Shree Prakash Singh asked deputy solicitor general SB Pandey to seek instructions as to whether the central government was contemplating to review the certificate granted by the Censor Board. The bench has posted the matter for the next hearing on Wednesday.

The bench declined to accept the plea that the disclaimer of the movie said that the movie was not based on the Ramayana. "When the filmmaker has shown Lord Rama, Devi Sita, Lakshman, Lord Hanuman, Ravana, Lanka etc., how the disclaimer of the film would convince the people at large that the story is not from Ramayana," the bench reacted strongly.

The bench was irked when it was apprised by petitioner's lawyer, Ronjana Agnihotri, that the movie may not only affect adversely the sentiments of the people at large, who worship Lord Rama, Sita, Hanuman etc., but the manner in which the characters of Ramayana have been depicted would create serious disharmony in the society also. It was stated that the petitioner failed to understand from where the content of the film had been borrowed.
